ADDITIONAL PLEA FOR INFORMATION ISABEL CELIS INVESTIGATION

There is no more tragic event for a family and, in fact, for a community than the taking of one of our children. We are proud to live in a society that does not tolerate such atrocities. We put aside all personal agendas and come together with a common purpose and steadfast determination to recover one of the most vulnerable members of our society – a child.

Isabel Celis, 6-years old, disappeared from her home in the area of South Craycroft Road and East Broadway Boulevard sometime between the approximate hours of 11:00 p.m. on Friday, April 20, 2012 and 8:00 a.m. on Saturday, April 21, 2012. Whoever is responsible for her disappearance was unaccounted for at least some amount of time during this period. The individual(s) responsible for Isabel's disappearance may also have exhibited some changes in their normal activities or behaviors on Saturday or on successive days. Someone in the community may unknowingly be associated with the person(s) responsible for Isabel's disappearance. They may be in a position to observe behavioral changes in that person(s), but may not have associated the person(s) with being responsible for Isabel's disappearance. Some things to consider include:

- The person(s) may have missed scheduled appointments, work, or other normal activities during the day on Saturday.
- The person(s) may have disappeared for a period of hours or even days, or may have left the area entirely since last weekend.
- The person(s) may have exhibited some noticeable behavioral changes. For example:
 - The person(s) may have been more nervous, irritable or secretive than normal.
 - The person(s) may display an unusual interest in the media coverage of Isabel's disappearance or conversely may not want to discuss the investigation.
 - The person(s) may have unexpectedly cleaned, painted, or altered his vehicle.

The exhibition of these or other behavioral changes do not necessarily mean that an individual was involved in Isabel's disappearance. In addition, the person responsible may not have exhibited the examples mentioned above. They are merely examples to help solicit information. If you have information that you are not certain is relevant, please do not hesitate to provide the information to the Tucson Police Department as soon as possible by calling 911 or 88-Crime or by
