Section 7: Description

SUMMARY

Note: This narrative of the Registration Form complements the corresponding narrative from the Speedway-Drachman Historic District (NRHP 1989). All section subtitles are repeated here or slightly modified, but generally only new information is included, as a continuation of the earlier text. The property lists at the end of this section—Contributing, Noncontributing, and Demolished—are comprehensive Feldman's Historic District lists combining the 1989 inventory with the updated 2004–2005 survey (SWCA 2004–2005).

See updated and new survey forms for photographs of all properties mentioned as examples in the text.

Feldman's Historic District is a historic residential area north of downtown Tucson and northwest of the University of Arizona campus. It includes the existing Speedway-Drachman Historic District (NRHP 1989), but this registration form: 1) amends the existing district to facilitate the name change; 2) changes the period of significance, now from 1901 to 1960; 3) changes the 1989 boundary through substantial increases to the northeast, north and west, and a small decrease on the south; and 4) re-evaluates all properties with standardized Contributing/Noncontributing methodology. The inclusive Feldman's neighborhood covers approximately 42 blocks roughly bounded by E. Speedway Boulevard on the south, N. Park Avenue on the east, E. Lee Street on the north, and N. 7th Avenue on the west.

The change in period of significance adds a number of mid-20th century houses, commercial buildings, and churches built after 1939. The period and boundary increase adds 166 Contributing properties—many in the mid-20th century Ranch Style—within the original district and adjacent to its west, north and northeast extents. The boundary decrease removes from the total number of properties 15 formerly Contributing residences along Speedway Boulevard, Demolished because of street widening and institutional expansions since 1989.

As part of this re-survey and nomination amendment project (SWCA 2004–2005), reevaluation of properties within the original district resulted in 73 changes to Contributing and Noncontributing status in the original district. Since 1989 within the original boundaries, 61 properties were sympathetically rehabilitated (exterior restoration) and are now classified as Contributing. Conversely, 12 properties suffered damage to their historic integrity—through both exterior alterations and addition of public-view-blocking fences and walls—and are now classified as Noncontributing. Further, by applying the State Historic Preservation Officer's current Contributing/Noncontributing methodology (Garrison 1992) to formerly Noncontributing properties with few if any changes since 1989, 19 were reclassified as Contributing. Extension of the period of significance to one year earlier, 1901, acknowledges the initial filing of the Feldman's Addition subdivision plat, initiating much of the neighborhood that continued to fill open lots through 1960. Extension of the period of significance forward to 1960 resulted in the addition of 33 properties built between the years 1940 and 1960 throughout the original district, in addition to the 185 properties (Contributing and Noncontributing) added through the boundary increase with this nomination amendment.

Houses, house-scale apartments, residential outbuildings, religious buildings, and a small commercial development in the greater Feldman's neighborhood amended in this nomination as Feldman's Historic District, generally retain high levels of integrity of location, design, materials, workmanship, feeling, setting, and association. Typical alterations range from medium-impact changes to porches, windows and doors, to major-impact changes through unsympathetic additions, complete changes of exterior materials, and privacy walls that hide from public view the majority of character-defining features. Through the Contributing/Noncontributing evaluation outlined in those FACTORS below, the amended district boundary encompasses a total of 616 properties of which 79.2 per cent are Contributing (488 properties) and 20.7 per cent are Noncontributing (128 properties) based on the 2004-2005 historic-properties survey update. See METHODOLOGY below for explanations of property counts and inventory numbers.

METHODOLOGY

For purposes of describing the neighborhood within its historic district boundaries, this nomination uses "the Feldman's neighborhood," instead of its multiple historic subdivision names, or the outmoded "Speedway-Drachman" label. That label, derived by assigning two major street names to a residential neighborhood not known historically or currently as "Speedway-Drachman," apparently originated from City of Tucson planning-area names assigned as early as the 1960s within arbitrary boundaries (Fey 2004). For the 2004 survey and present nomination updates, all stakeholders—residents, city preservation office, and SHPO—agreed to an appropriate name change for the historic district along with other amendments accomplished through this Registration Form. The nominated Feldman's Historic District of 2005 includes the same general area as the current Feldman's Neighborhood Association, covering six historic subdivisions that contribute to the district: Feldman's Addition (1901-1906/1924-1925), University Home Addition (1902/1903), Tucson Heights (1904-1905), Schumacher Addition (1908), Highland Park Addition (1921/1922), and Bronx Park Addition (1923).

From late 2003 through 2005, SWCA and MDG consultants reviewed the 1989 Speedway-Drachman historic properties survey (Husband 1989b) on file at the Arizona State Historic Preservation Office in Phoenix. They located only those Arizona Historic Property Inventory Forms for buildings within the NRHP-listed 1989 historic district. If a larger area had been surveyed in 1989 from which to determine those boundaries, additional survey forms apparently are no longer extant in either Phoenix or Tucson. Further, in 1989 the SHPO offered two types of forms, the "long" two-page form to gather similar information collected by current (2005) forms, and the "short" one-page form for properties pre-determined to be Noncontributing for any reason, including age (not yet 50 years old) and alterations. Most historic district properties listed in 1989 as Noncontributing appear on the "short forms," and any updates for those properties in 2004-2005 required not only reevaluation but also recording on the current two-page form. Conversely, 19 properties listed in 1989 as Contributing on the "long form" have been demolished or severely altered to the status of Noncontributing. Amendments were made to those properties' original forms to explain the change in status for each property.

As noted in the SUMMARY above and elsewhere, the choice in 1989 of "1939" as the end of the period of significance resulted—for a neighborhood that did not halt home construction for two more decades—in an outdated nomination within one year of listing. Several individual amendments to Speedway-Drachman properties' status have been approved by the SHPO and the NPS through the years, most responding to proactive requests for reclassification as Contributing properties.

In recent years the City of Tucson's historic preservation program, the SHPO, and the National Park Service's National Register Program evolved through much experience into a more practical approach to age and grouping of historic properties. The 50-year-old guideline is now tempered for historic districts that contain properties that will be 50 years old in generally five to ten years. The National Park Service (NPS) National Register Bulletin: Guidelines for Evaluating and Nominating Properties that have Achieved Significance Within the Past Fifty Years (Sherfy and Luce 1998) acknowledges that "properties less than 50 years old may be integral parts of a district when there is sufficient perspective to consider the properties as historic."

This is accomplished by demonstrating that: (a) the district's period of significance is justified as a discrete period with a defined beginning and end; (b) the character of the district's historic resources is clearly defined and assessed; (c) specific resources in the district are demonstrated to date from that discrete era; and, (d) the majority of district properties are over 50 years old. In these instances it is not necessary to prove exceptional importance of either the district itself or of the less-than-50-year-old properties.

Historic districts with less-than-50 year-old properties that share elements of historical and architectural significance of the districts illustrate the policy discussed [in the Bulletin]. For example, some historic districts represent planned communities whose plan, layout of the streets and lots, and original construction of homes all began more than 50 years ago. Frequently, construction of buildings continued into the less-than-50-year period, with the later resources resulting from identical historical patterns as the earlier buildings and representing a continuation of the planned community design.

While some districts have a unified historic and/or architectural development, it is important to recognize that integral does not mean that a district must have homogeneous resources or significance. Districts can also include diverse resources that represent the area's development over time. A commercial or residential area, for example, may form a unified whole, but have resources built in a variety of styles over a long period of time. In such a context, a post-World War II movie theater or recreation facility may have increased significance because these are important buildings and represent that period of the district's history. Thus such buildings often are integral parts of districts in which they are located. (Sherfy and Luce 1998)

The Feldman's neighborhood fits this scenario, including a "defined beginning and end" that represents the postwar rush for housing through a practical “buildout” of the neighborhood by 1960, along with major physical and social changes in the community at the same time.

In further evolution of NRHP evaluation approach, by considering the “Contributing” status of integral 44- to 49-year-old places within the potential or existing historic district at the time of survey, their own contribution to the district is documented, and the need for re-survey in the short term is lessened or eliminated. Prior to the 2004-2005 survey update for Feldman's, the 1989 survey effort did not acknowledge properties built after 1939 (then exactly 50 years earlier). In contrast, the 2004-2005 Feldman's effort anticipated inevitable aging—and ongoing alterations—of Tucson's postwar neighborhoods and commercial areas, and explored historical changes related to specific milestone dates, such as changes in Tucson neighborhoods resulting from the city's General Land Use Plan ratified in 1960 (Bufkin 1981; see Section 8).

Many Feldman's residential properties include “related secondary resources” as defined by NPS registration form instructions (McClelland 1997:14), usually garages and small outbuildings that are not counted separately in the property inventory. A few platted lots contain more than one substantial building, usually additional residences or guesthouses, counted separately and with distinct addresses and survey inventory numbers. The 1989 survey assigned “SD-” (Speedway-Drachman) prefixes to inventory numbers 1 – 500; the 2004-2005 survey assigned “F-” (Feldman's) prefixes to inventory numbers 501 and forward.

REVIEW OF THE 1989 NATIONAL REGISTER NOMINATION'S SECTION 7

Original nomination for the Speedway-Drachman Historic District described the location, geography, general history, and architecture of a neighborhood that features a surprisingly broad range of “small to medium-sized one- or one-and-one-half-story homes” (Husband 1989a). Upon its cardinal-directions street grid are cardinal-oriented homes in architectural styles ranging from National Folk configurations to Bungalows and Tudor Revival houses, and Spanish Colonial variants of Mission and Pueblo Revivals and Monterrey Style. Two former tuberculosis sanitariums (a third no longer extant, Hillcrest Sanitarium, stood as late as 1948 on the block bounded by Adams, 3rd, 4th, and Lee; see Sanborn 1948:75) and the former University Heights School are the largest historic buildings in the district, all sympathetically converted to apartments by 1989. However, the 1929 St. Luke's in the Desert Sanatorium, due to a substantial circa 2000 remodeling, is now Noncontributing to the district; however, its freestanding 1933 chapel by Tucson architect Josias Thomas Joesler fortunately remains a Contributing resource to the district. Besides St. Luke's Chapel, the only other religious building considered Contributing at the time of nomination, the First Southern Baptist Church sanctuary at 445 E. Speedway Boulevard, was built in 1939 in the Classical Revival Style. That building has since been crowded by many institutional additions, but retains sufficient individual integrity to hold its Contributing status.

The 1989 Section 7 conclusion warned of a trend favoring the loss of historic houses for large apartment complexes popular in the University of Arizona campus orbit. The text also noted a major in-progress city-sponsored widening of Speedway Boulevard that threatened a number of neighborhood properties along that arterial. Indeed, the 1990-1994 Speedway reconstruction resulted in the loss of at least one additional Contributing residence (825 E. Speedway Blvd.) after the project's completion. The amended historic district's southern boundary reflects several other losses along the Speedway arterial as well.

SETTING

While the integrity of setting declined along Speedway Boulevard after its early 1990s reconstruction, city planners envisioned this thoroughfare from its origin as a major east-west arterial, from the time shortly after 1901 that its name changed from Feldman Street to Speedway Boulevard. The post-1960 apartment-block-construction trend within the Feldman's neighborhood fortunately halted after 1989, and the University of Arizona adopted in 2003 a campus master plan that pledged a cooperative relationship with its surrounding residential historic districts (University of Arizona 2003). As a result of these stabilizing trends, the Feldman's neighborhood overall retains remarkable integrity of setting, plus feeling and association, for a 20th century neighborhood with similar residential massing, uniform setbacks, consistent streetscapes, and continued popularity of desert-plant yard landscapes. Unfortunately the percentage of single-family homeowner-occupants in Feldman's is an alarmingly low rate of 23 per cent (in 2004).

Expansion of the historic district boundaries, particularly along E. Drachman and E. Adams Streets around N. 1st and N. 2nd Avenues, results in a more comprehensive neighborhood setting, at least for the postwar development of the neighborhood. The half-block commercial strip at 1400-1414 N. 1st Avenue, begun in 1948 and expanded to its present configuration in 1960, served local customers with pedestrian and auto access to its laundry, grocery store and drug store. The large religious complex at 628 E. Adams Street, expanding a small sanctuary after 1950, also followed a traditional neighborhood trend of churches within residential additions.

Survey and research decisions in 2004-2005 on the integrity of individual properties were based on the current condition of all properties, and on a number of factors unique to the Feldman's neighborhood based on its buildings and cultural landscapes. See CONTRIBUTING/NONCONTRIBUTING FACTORS below for the process of decisions in 2004-2005, also applicable to future evaluations following evolution or incidental changes to properties in the Feldman's neighborhood.

LANDSCAPE

Another recent progression in NPS, SHPO, and community approaches toward evaluating historic significance is the factor of landscape, acknowledging that buildings are much more than individual objects with no immediate context. Part of the 2004 strategy for updating the 1989 Feldman's survey recognized its "softscape" of diverse vegetation, "hardscape" of yard features, and streetscape infrastructure as significant historic and visual factors.

United States Department of the Interior
National Park Service

National Register of Historic Places Continuation Sheet

Section 7 Page 10

Feldman's Historic District

Thus the 2004 intensive survey forms include acknowledgment of vegetation in general, plus notes on individual properties for irrigation and plant types. An oft-overlooked aspect of landscape—further acknowledging a “cultural landscape” for the neighborhood and for each property—is the “hardscape” and transportation infrastructure: streets, curb and gutter, driveways, sidewalks, entry walks, walls, arbors, etc. Most of these items from 1940-1960 are considered significant elements (see CHARACTER-DEFINING FEATURES below) that are worthy of preservation, typically concrete, sometimes stamp-dated, and in Feldman's frequently cast with curb-surface street names and “WPA” (the federal Works Progress Administration) credit for these 1935-1942 New Deal-funded improvements. For evaluation purposes, these are considered elements within the property boundary of each individual building (residence or church in the Feldman's neighborhood), rather than separated as city property and infrastructure systems as a whole.

In roughly sequential order of appearance, “hardscape” and “softscape” features of a typical Feldman's residential property progress inward from the perimeters. In the best maintained yards, these features range from the rectilinear street system, to the WPA-stamped curbs and sidewalks, to a perpendicular walkway approach to the house, to a low retaining wall surmounted by walkway steps, to desert plantings of cacti and succulents, to mature trees (Aleppo pines, date palms, juniper and mesquite) or shrubbery close to the house, to steps up to front porch surfaces in line with the front door. Many yards are carpeted with gravel, and many yards exhibit little maintenance other than early attempts to establish grass lawns and ornamental bushes along property lines. Popularity in the last decade of dense privacy walls threatens the very characteristics that distinguish the historic district's landscape.

A recent major sidewalk-development project (in 2004), with a city infrastructure grant to the neighborhood association, brought to Feldman's consistent walking surfaces, streetlights on some corridors, curb cuts for disability access, and other upgrades, while saving historic “WPA” stamps and street names on curbs where possible.

ARCHITECTURAL CHARACTER OF THE HISTORIC DISTRICT

In addition to the typical characteristics noted below under ARCHITECTURAL STYLES, other features are essential to the integrity—and thus Contributing status—of historic residential properties in the Feldman's neighborhood:

- uniform setback
- façade width of original floorplan (no intruding side additions)
- rhythm of foundation placements on lots
- retaining walls to adjust house geometry to site variations
- front drive at side consistent with block face (many houses have only alley drives)
- accommodation of pedestrians: sidewalks, walkways, small but shading porches
- accommodation of autos: curbs, drives, carports, garages

United States Department of the Interior
National Park Service

National Register of Historic Places Continuation Sheet

Section 7 Page 11

Feldman's Historic District

- exterior building materials: stucco, or unpainted red brick, or concrete block unpainted or painted
- roof finishes of composition shingles, asbestos, and barrel tiles

The 1400 N. 1st Avenue commercial strip, churches, and former tuberculosis sanitariums deviate from these residential characteristics, but all these institutional buildings are low scale surrounded by limited formal landscape improvements, announce their services with restrained signs, and accommodate both pedestrian and automobile access.

ARCHITECTURAL STYLES OF THE HISTORIC DISTRICT

Expanded boundaries of the 1989 Speedway-Drachman Historic District incorporate as similar a diversity of housing examples in age and architectural styles as represented in the original boundaries. Along the appended block faces of E. Mabel, E. Drachman, E. Adams, and E. Lee Street, plus N. 1st Avenue and other thoroughfares are fine examples of 1910s-1940s Bungalows (135 E. Mabel Street of 1918, 1430 N. 1st of 1925, and 1521 N. 6th of 1949) and 1920s Spanish Colonial Revivals (621 E. Drachman of 1928) including the related Mission Revival (127 E. Mabel Street of 1927). Also, Sanborn Maps reveal a proliferation of small detached garages associated with most individual houses, the majority constructed of adobe (Sanborn 1948).

The Ranch Style appeared as an evolution of the Feldman's neighborhood's signature early-20th century housing by 1941, with completion of the 895-square-foot brick house at 421 E. Helen Street. This modern but compact residence entered a housing market in Feldman's and Tucson that had changed little since subdivision construction commenced in 1902: interior space less than 1,000 square feet, simple walls of thick masonry for low heat gain, conservative window sizes and placement for cross-ventilation, front and back doors, all under a low roof apparently to prevent the heat gain of large attics. The new Federal Housing Administration (FHA) standards (implemented in 1934) inspired some subtle changes by 1940, but mostly to the interior for accommodation of new appliances and other health and safety standards. Ironically, the quality of Feldman's earlier houses matched many "new" FHA standards, so that the Ranch Houses fit well into the neighborhood despite their first-glance differences in proportions and straightforward presentations of brick walls laid in common bond. The 1989 historic district nomination is therefore amended with the following additional architectural categories:

20th CENTURY REVIVALS

Tudor Revival

The 1989 evaluation of the neighborhood identified one example of the Tudor Revival Style (627 E. Speedway Blvd.) in the Feldman's neighborhood, noting that the style was "little used in Tucson" (Husband 1989a:7/11). That 1927 example, fortunately surviving the Speedway Boulevard widening, enclosed 1,979 square feet of interior space, indicating that the style might have been chosen by someone wanting a larger house than offered with the typical Feldman's floorplan. Likewise, a 1948 Tudor Revival house missed in the 1989 sweep, (1222 N. Fourth Ave.) wrapping a relatively large house of 1,458 square feet within Tudor details of steeply pitched roofs over asymmetrical extended bays with both hipped and clipped-gable configurations. Otherwise, the house is built of common-bond bricks framing steel-sash windows under an asbestos-shingled roof with barrel-tile ridgelines...all typical features of contemporaneous Ranch Style houses in Arizona.

National Park Service

MODERN MOVEMENT

Ranch

In their Guide to Tucson Architecture (2002), Anne Nequette and Brooks Jeffery describe the Tucson Ranch Style house as "typically...single-story...low in profile and horizontal in expression" (Nequette and Jeffery 2002:292-293). Feldman's examples of the Ranch Style exhibit a number of subtle adjustments and details to add variety—a Federal Housing Administration hallmark—to this formula, including front door placement (centered or off-center), porch configurations (from door-protecting stoops to full-width verandas), and automobile protection (driveway in front with carport or rear alley-access drive invisible from front). Ranch Style additions within the amended Feldman's Historic District all follow these modest-scale patterns. (A few slightly later Ranch examples in and very near the historic district reflect the growing national trend of long, low facades stretching across more than one original narrow lot, as with 345 E. Drachman Street, built on two lots in 1961 and which also encloses a one-car garage at the east end of its continuous facade. One nearby Ranch example, just outside the district boundary at 345 E. Elm Street built in 1950, deviates from the otherwise strict cardinal-orientation with oblique southwest façade presentation to a right-angle intersection.)

Thus the modest-scale "Transitional Ranch," so-called because of its position in the move from bungalows of the previous generation to the very wide and very low California Ranch that appeared in large numbers in new Arizona subdivisions by the late 1950s, predominates post-1940 house types in the Feldman's neighborhood. Occasionally the "transitional" nature of design is quite evident, particularly in examples (415 and 401 E. Helen Street) that package distinct bungalow features—L plan under front-facing multiple gables, exposed rafter ends, medium-pitch roofs—into the Ranch Style simplicity of plain brick walls and horizontal-emphasis windows.

These and other typical character-defining features of the immediate prewar and postwar Ranch Style homes in Feldman's include:

- L floor plan with extended side bay presented to street; or L floor plan, single-plane façade parallel to street with side bay extended to rear; or rectangular plan with single-plane façade parallel to street
- some foundations only slightly above ground level, most often a concrete slab; some foundations raised up to two feet by a concrete slab or a concrete perimeter beam for pier-and-beam foundations
- relatively narrow façade conforming to the standard 75-foot lot widths
- occasional screened sleeping porch, or "Arizona room," visible from street
- exterior walls of painted stucco, or "running bond" or "common bond"—with 6th-row headers—pattern

- of standard brick (measuring 2x4x8 inches), or concrete block/"pumice block" (8x8x16)
- some gable-side fireplaces in masonry materials that match wall finish materials
- brick window sills
- "picture window," at least one, presented to street from interior living room
- casement windows, in steel just before the war, in wood just after the war, and again in steel by the later 1940s and throughout the 1950s
- some double-hung wooden windows because of steel shortages shortly after World War II
- occasional casement window at one façade corner, usually lighting kitchen inside
- single front entry door, off center, sometimes 90° to street with entry into L
- shaded porches as shallow stoop, inset corner, or full-width under extended eave
- porch posts of wood, sometimes roughly finished, sometimes with brackets; porch supports of fabricated metal on later houses and updates of earlier houses
- low roof following L plan, with multiple gables, or hipped, or combinations of both
- exposed rafter ends
- gable ends of brick unbroken for wall surface, often with vents of symmetrical patterned spaces in the brickwork
- various roof materials, composition (asphalt) shingles, or asbestos shingles, or barrel tile (see Spanish Colonial discussion below), or flat shingles (usually asbestos originally) with barrel-tile ridgelines, or flat roof with surrounding parapets (see Pueblo Revival discussion below), or wood shingle
- roof-mounted evaporative cooler fan units
- rarely an original offset chimney on side gable or centered at rear
- driveways most frequently at one side of the lot leading into shelter (see next)
- detached and attached garages, wall finishes matching the companion house
- carports under an extension of the house roof side gable, or as a shed extension off the house side

Ranch Style variations in Spanish Colonial and Pueblo Revivals (sometimes gathered under the description "Spanish Eclectic") are contemporaneous romantic reflections of the perceived origin of the Ranch home, from the California, Arizona, and New Mexico rancheros of Spain's colonial era (see May 1946). Houses with gabled or hipped barrel-tile roofs on otherwise classic Ranch Style features (above) are often categorized as Spanish Colonial Ranch, and they occasionally display other faithful details of distressed-wood porch beams and deeper, more functional porches. Stuccoed-wall Ranch houses with a floor plan similar to contemporaries, but flat roof surrounded by parapets present the Pueblo Revival variation, such as 421 E. Mabel Street).

The dynamics of a postwar Tucson economy sometimes led to residential alterations that applied new style elements to older houses. In some cases—such as 1217 N. Tyndall Avenue, 41 and 527 E. Speedway Boulevard, 1436 N. 1st Avenue—a porch infill (as opposed to complete enclosure) brought simple Ranch Style details and steel-sash windows to older bungalows and Spanish Colonial examples. In other cases, such as 1227 N. Fifth Avenue, porch reconstruction before 1960 introduced poured concrete surfaces and fabricated-metal posts. On a case-by-case basis, these changes might be considered appropriate within the expanded period of significance, acknowledging a range of sympathetic changes as a historic evolutionary process in the neighborhood.

Before the box-apartment trend of the 1960s, the Feldman's neighborhood accommodated a steady rental market associated with the nearby University of Arizona campus first with rented rooms in existing houses and converted garages. In the late 1940s through mid 1950s an increasing demand for apartments led to Ranch Style duplexes on single lots—such as 1508 N. 5th Avenue and 834 E. Lee Street—and Ranch Style clusters of single- and multiple-unit buildings—exemplified by 409-425 E. Drachman Street and 1325-1333 N. 2nd Avenue.

International

Also called American International and Contemporary Style, the "International" modern alternatives to the dominant Ranch Style choice in Feldman's—for examples 1334 N. Fifth Avenue, 204 E. Helen Street, and 333 E. Drachman—followed similar foundation-plan, setback, driveway and landscape characters of their Ranch Style neighbors. But these examples feature some distinctive details popular with design-conscious owners possibly connected to the university through allied arts.

- flat roofs extended as cantilevered eaves, and as carports supported by thin metal posts
- pronounced fascias around roof perimeter

Other: Postwar Commercial

The commercial strip at 1400-1414 N. 1st Avenue, developed between 1948 and 1960, follows the Modern Movement's typical postwar trends, according to Richard Longstreth in The Buildings of Main Street (2000:65). In comparison to more exuberant commercial buildings of a decade before, the postwar "façade no longer conveys the sense of a slick package so much as it resembles an open container for the salesroom beyond...the exterior wall surface plays no more than a background role." Original extended signs for the adjacent grocery, laundry, and drug stores further confirm the trend toward attracting occupants of passing automobiles as much as customers walking from their nearby homes. Another commercial business completed in 1960, 219 E. Mabel St. (originally A&A Ambulance, now Falcon Pools), is a narrow-façade, long-sided concrete-block 2-story building on the edge of the neighborhood near N. 6th Avenue. The public presentation juxtaposes large blocks for an entry pavilion, a cantilevered balcony above, and wood-trimmed walls.

Other: Mission and Romanesque Revivals

By extending the period of significance and survey area from the 1989 Feldman's effort, two additional religious buildings meet the Contributing tests of historic integrity for neighborhood services in a residential context. The Tucson Chinese Christian Fellowship congregation occupies a 1951 sanctuary and connecting wings originally built by a Latter Day Saints (LDS) congregation at 307 E. Helen Street. Their sanctuary is a simple brick flat-roofed building with implied Mission Revival (symmetrical stepped entry parapet) and Territorial (contrasting brick coping atop the parapet walls) influences in an otherwise Modern presentation. Church (originally called Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, still occupied [2005] by the same congregation with evolved name) at 628 E. Adams St. occupies a circa 1950 sanctuary, service wings, and later additions of modern simplicity. The main entry facing Adams features a brick "bell tower" and round arches in an updated Romanesque Revival presentation.

CONTRIBUTING/NONCONTRIBUTING FACTORS

Survey methodology in the 1989 survey generally considered properties eligible that retained original 1) footprint (foundation, plan and façade, as seen from public view), 2) roof form (in public view), 3) exterior materials, and 4) windows, doors and porches (in public view). Beyond these four conditions considered acceptable for Contributing status in previous surveys, typical medium-impact changes over the years in the Feldman's neighborhood include window and door replacements, porch infills (porch shape still visible) and porch enclosures (original porch shape no longer clear), roof material replacements (addition of barrel tiles when not original, replacement of asbestos shingles with composition), masonry painting or new stucco, and landscape structures not obscuring the building façade. Typical major-impact changes included new exterior finishes (stucco over brick, stuccoed "bump-out" window and door surrounds, artificial siding), window and door infills and replacements larger or smaller than original openings, façade additions that accommodate a variety of expansions including bathrooms, bedrooms and garages, and—particularly—privacy walls and vegetation densities that partially or totally obscure the historic building façade from public view. Surprisingly, most existing carports appear to be original or within the period of significance (before 1960), and few original adobe garages have been infilled, testament to the value of auto shelter in Tucson's climate.

This is a dynamic neighborhood economically, and mild-to-major exterior changes have been popular for many years with a large percentage of single-family and duplex owners, and particularly absentee landlords. The Contributing and Noncontributing factors below further analyze the condition of building and landscape fabric in the Feldman's neighborhood, and provide guidelines for their National Register status. These conditions, combined with MODERN MOVEMENT character-defining features noted above, additionally offer guidelines for residents to distinguish, now and in the future, the difference between remodeling and rehabilitation, the latter a calculated approach to update a building without fatally damaging its historic integrity.

As a general rule, of the five typical medium-impact changes in historic exterior appearance on Feldman's properties—updated windows and doors, porch alterations, non-historic roof materials, subtle wall-material changes, and pronounced landscape structures—their effects are considered cumulative. If only two of these changes have been made, the building generally can be considered Contributing; if three to five of these changes have been made, the building generally is considered Noncontributing. Mitigating Factors below utilized in 2004-2005 and are recommended in the future to settle on-the-line dilemmas between Contributing and Noncontributing.

Paint colors are considered reversible, especially on wood and stucco surfaces. While non-historically painted bricks and concrete blocks were not considered to detract from historic conditions in the 2004-2005 survey and evaluation, future reversal of masonry paint should be undertaken with care, without damaging the original masonry surfaces (i.e. no particle blasting, no high-pressure water blasting, and only hand-scrubbing or approved-chemical removal). If vegetation is particularly lush and gradually masks a building façade, "Contributing" property owners should prevent the foliage from obliterating views of the house from streets and sidewalks. Enthusiasm for view-blocking walls will hopefully wane in future investments, and existing obtrusive walls can be removed or drastically redesigned.

Contributing Registration Requirements (based on the seven NRHP integrity aspects of location, design, materials, workmanship, feeling, setting, and association)

1. Footprint intact, particularly foundation limits in public view: front and sides.
2. Roof form intact, particularly roof edging in public view, but without interference of excessive height of non-historic rear additions.
3. Original exterior wall-surface material (not affected by paint colors) and roof-surface material.
4. Original windows and doors, and in declining significance:
  - a. Original windows, but doors replaced.
  - b. Original window openings with sympathetic replacements.
5. Porches/entry stoops/verandahs intact, with no more alteration than sympathetic infill, or infilled within the period of significance.

Noncontributing Negatives (quick decision on Noncontributing status)

1. Front addition eliminating substantial part of original façade and protruding into the historic setback.
2. Porch enclosure or severe alteration, as opposed to well-designed porch infill that retains original porch outlines and/or reveals.
3. Side addition: without sympathetic design and setback; equal to or larger than original house; incompatible surface material (as opposed to exact match=not OK; sympathetic material=OK).
4. Window and door replacements that expand, shrink, otherwise alter, or blank-out original openings and their surrounds.
5. Perimeter walls and gates blocking views—pedestrian and auto—of front elevations.

Mitigating Factors to settle Registration status

1. Substantial documented original landscape and plantings present and dominant (e.g. mature trees).
2. Extremely rare example of building style and original materials.
3. Occupation by significant individuals who would recognize the building today.
4. Passes the text: are the majority of character-defining features intact?

5. Passes the extreme test: would its removal be an irreplaceable loss?

INTEGRITY

The 2004-2005 survey update of the Feldman's neighborhood applied a consistent test to each property, based on the seven aspects of NRHP integrity (annotated below), the eligibility guidelines of the Arizona Historic Sites Review Committee (Garrison 1992), and an appreciation of character-defining features (above) unique to this historic district. As a result, not only were many properties re-evaluated as Contributing simply because of progressing age (built between 1940 and 1960), but many more changed from their 1989 evaluation of Noncontributing because their alterations had not caused a fatal loss of integrity or character-defining features.

Quotes and approaches below on integrity aspects of the Feldman's neighborhood are from the official NPS description of each, National Register Bulletin [15]: How to Apply the National Register Criteria for Evaluation (Savage and Pope 1997:44-45).

- Location:* The Feldman's neighborhood retains integrity of location in that all its contributing resources occupy their original sites from the period of significance, 1901-1960, through the present.
- Design:* The large majority of building forms, residential plans, property spaces, internal structures, and architectural styles of Feldman's are intact and represent considerable integrity of design. As a historic district, Feldman's retains "spatial relationships between major features; visual rhythms in [the] streetscape [and] landscape plantings; the layout and materials of walkways and roads; and the relationship of other features" (Savage and Pope 1997).
- Materials:* The physical elements of Feldman's, combined during the period of significance to form the patterns of residential buildings and associated properties, "retain the key exterior materials dating from the period of...historic significance" and "reveal the preferences of those who created the propert[ies] and indicate the availability of particular types of materials and technologies" (Savage and Pope 1997).
- Workmanship:* Through the application and assembly of materials used during the period of significance, workmanship in the Feldman's neighborhood retains "evidence of the crafts" in Tucson's postwar building boom, and illustrates "the aesthetic principles of [this] historic period." In addition, workmanship here reveals "individual, local, [and] regional...applications of both technological practices and aesthetic principles" (Savage and Pope 1997).
- Setting:* The physical environment of Feldman's is very much intact, particularly away from the busy

Speedway and N. 6th Avenue corridors, through "relationships between buildings and other features [and] open space." Setting is retained within the boundary of the historic district, and also "between the property and its surroundings," including the university and adjacent historic neighborhoods such as West University to the south (Savage and Pope 1997).

Association: Feldman's physical setting is "sufficiently intact to convey" its period of significance to "an observer," particularly someone familiar with the neighborhood between 1940 and 1960. Integrity of association is dependent upon strength in other aspects of integrity, particularly design, materials, workmanship and setting (Savage and Pope 1997).

Feeling: The physical features of the Feldman's neighborhood, "taken together, convey the property's historic character." The neighborhood's retention of original design, materials, workmanship, and setting relate the strong feeling of pre- and postwar residential subdivisions in Tucson (Savage and Pope 1997).
