

Dear WaterSmart Kids,

Hi! It's me, Pete, from Tucson Water. Over the years I've had so many fun roles: pirate, doctor, chef, explorer, coach, and even a superhero! Each summer I've been asked to play a new character to help teach you how to be WaterSmart and to "Beat the Peak." Things have changed over the years here in Tucson, and we need to remember that conservation isn't something to think about only in the summer time.

With the arrival of the Central Arizona Project, we now have water from the Colorado River and recycled water to supply our community. But that doesn't mean it's okay to waste water. Water in the desert is still limited.

Here in the beautiful Sonoran Desert, we know how smart plants and animals are at saving water. All of us can be WaterSmart too and learn new ways to conserve water!

Enjoy learning more about water savings from me, Pete, as we revisit many of the fun characters from years past - encouraging us all to be WaterSmart!

Pete

P.S. You can still call me "Pete the Beak!"
