Water Outage: Harrison Road and Escalante Road

A contractor working at the intersection of south Harrison Road and east Escalante Road damaged a 12" water main yesterday evening resulting in an interruption of water service in the area. Tucson Water crews have been working overnight to restore water service to approximately 1,200 customers affected by the outage.

The boundary of the area affected by the outage is approximately the Pantano Wash on the north, East Irvington Road on the south, South Houghton Road to the east, and South Harrison Road to the west.

Customers affected by the outage may pick up bottled water at either of two distribution points set up by Tucson Water. The first location is at the intersection of south Houghton Road and east Irvington Road, in the parking lot of Quick Trip Market. The second location is on Harrison Road, south of Escalante, near the entrance to the Harrison Hills Mobile Home Park.

A temporary water line connection will be made early this morning to reestablish water service into the area. The temporary connection is expected to be in service by 9:00 a.m. Customers in this area may experience low water pressure while service is being provided through the temporary connection.

Southbound Harrison Road is closed at Burnett Street, northbound Harrison Road is closed at Irvington Road, and westbound Escalante is closed at Harrison Road. Motorists are asked to find alternate routes until repairs can be completed.
